PROJECT

In order to become more inclusive and improve the experience of transgender, non-binary and gender exploring students at school, a school needs to have and make visible an inclusive school policy.

Including our good practice guidance supporting transgender, non-binary and gender exploring students in your inclusive school policy supports all the other actions for inclusivity that the school undertakes. Here is an example of why this is important:

Jake talks to Mr. Jones regularly about their gender identity and the struggles they have at school because of it. Mr. Jones really wants to help make Jake's experience in school better, but he doesn't really know how to help or how to change the way things have always been done. Me. Jones is also scared of getting things wrong or getting in trouble for calling Jake by their preferred pronouns. Then Mr. Jones receives an email from the head of school one afternoon that includes an explanation of amendments that they have made to school policy in order to make it more inclusive. The new policy outlines how teachers can and should support transgender, non-binary and gender exploring students and gives Mr. Jones the confidence he needs to talk to other teachers and students about improving things for Jake.
