Anyone can be an ally to transgender, non-binary and gender exploring people. Allies support the inclusion of everyone and stand up and speak up against bullying. We need more allies!

Here is an example of how allies can support transgender, non-binary and gender exploring students:

Alys does not know Jake very well, but they have classes together. She has seen how in the school yard Jake avoids many of the other students when they can. Alys does not like that Jake is excluded and sometimes bullied and teased by the other students. One day walking down the hall, she sees that a poster about transgender and LGBTQI+ terms and scans the information on her phone so she can read it at home. When she comes to school the next day she shows her friends and talks to them about it. In the school yard that day, Alys and a few friends go over to talk to Jake and they invite Jake to join their new LGBTQI+ and Allies group.
